0. Authors cannot reproduce the Article for commercial purposes

1. ◇ use the unpublished Article, in form and content as submitted for publication in the Journal

◇ Provided they acknowledge that the Article has been submitted for publication in the journal from the relevant society and Blackwell Publishing

2. post an electronic version of the Article on their personal website, their employer's website/repository and on free public servers in their subject area.

3. ◇ use the accepted version of the Article as originally submitted for publication in the Journal, and updated to include any amendments made after peer review.

◇ Provided they give appropriate acknowledgment to the journal, the relevant society and Blackwell Publishing

◇ When posting on the web, authors must give full bibliographic details plus a link to the published version of the Article as follows: 'The definitive version is available at www3.interscience.wiley.com'.

4. post their version of the Article on their personal website, their employer's website/repository and on free public servers in their subject area after the embargo period stipulated by the journal has been passed (note that the embargo period will vary by journal, e.g. 6 months or 12 months, and that some journals do not have any embargo on self-archiving at all; This embargo period is clearly stipulated on copyright agreements and in the terms and conditions relating to the use of PDF offprints.).

5. you are not permitted to post the Blackwell Publishing PDF version of the Article online.

1. ◇ post preprints on public servers
 - ◇ post a pre-print version of the journal article on Internet web sites including electronic pre-print servers, and to retain indefinitely such version on such servers or sites
 - ◇ Cell Press and The Lancet have policies that differ as to preprints, as they will not consider for publication articles already posted publicly. This is a rule agreed upon by The International Committee of Medical Journal Editors. However, both Cell and The Lancet welcome Elsevier's policy on post-publication posting and follow it for their journals.
2. post a revised personal version of the text of the final journal article (to reflect changes made in the peer review process) on the author's personal or institutional web site or server, incorporating the complete citation and with a link to the Digital Object Identifier (DOI) of the article.
3. need to include in each such posting a full citation of the published journal article (once known) and a link to the homepage of the journal on ScienceDirect or, better, the DOI of the published article.

0. IEEE-copyrighted collected works, such as Transactions, Journals, Magazines, and conference proceedings (full text and/or abstracts) and collections of published papers (including collections distributed from a single server or created through a collection of pointers that refer to versions posted by IEEE authors), may not be posted for electronic distribution without prior written permission from IEEE. Such permission will be contingent upon the placement of prominently displayed copyright and reuse notices. Another condition in granting permission will be that the posted collected work includes a monitoring mechanism for authorizing access to the material and for the reporting of usage data.
 1. must add the following notice to the first screen of any of his/her previously posted electronic preprint_versions of the paper: “This work has been submitted to the IEEE for possible publication. Copyright may be transferred without notice, after which this version may no longer be accessible.”
 2. ◇ must add the IEEE copyright notice to any previously posted electronic versions of the particular paper submitted
 - ◇ provide IEEE with the electronic address_(URL, ftp address, etc.) of the primary electronic posting.

3. must replace the previous electronic version of the accepted paper with either (1) the full citation to the IEEE work or (2) the IEEE-published version, including the IEEE copyright notice and full citation.
4. ◇ Authors and/or their companies shall have the right to post their IEEE-copyrighted material on their own servers without permission
 - ◇ provided that the server displays a prominent notice alerting readers to their obligations with respect to copyrighted material. An example of an acceptable notice is: “This material is presented to ensure timely dissemination of scholarly and technical work. Copyright and all rights therein are retained by authors or by other copyright holders. All persons copying this information are expected to adhere to the terms and constraints invoked by each author's copyright. In most cases, these works may not be reposted without the explicit permission of the copyright holder.”
 - ◇ provided that the posted work includes the IEEE copyright notice
5. Copyright notice: “©20xx IEEE. Personal use of this material is permitted. However, permission to reprint/republish this material for advertising or promotional purposes or for creating new collective works for resale or redistribution to servers or lists, or to reuse any copyrighted component of this work in other works must be obtained from the IEEE.”

1. Prior Publication: the content has not been published previously and will not be submitted for publication elsewhere while the manuscript is under review. Preprints, whether paper copies or noncitable postings on a publicly accessible Web site, are not considered publications.
2. Embargo Policy: For manuscripts considered to be "in press" or approved for publication, the public release of information should not precede the actual publication of the work. The publication date is defined as the date the first copy is mailed from the printer or the first day the issue is posted full-text online. The official release of videotape presentations and electronic prepublication of articles on the Internet should adhere to the embargo policy.
3. AAI will grant a limited one-time waiver permitting authors to deposit an accepted manuscript into PubMed Central, provided that the corresponding author:

0. ◇ section 1: The AMS copyright notice must be displayed on the first page of any AMS copyrighted work that is published in print or on the first screen of a digitized work (such as a website). It is acceptable to place the string “© Copyright [date of publication] AMS” as a hypertext link to the full copyright notice. AMS’s Full Copyright Notice: © Copyright [date of publication] American Meteorological Society (AMS). Permission to use figures, tables, and brief excerpts from this work in scientific and educational works is hereby granted provided that the source is acknowledged. Any use of material in this work that is determined to be “fair use” under Section 107 of the U.S. Copyright Act or that satisfies the conditions specified in Section 108 of the U.S. Copyright Act (17 USC §108, as revised by P.L. 94-553) does not require the AMS’s permission. Republication, systematic reproduction, posting in electronic form on servers, or other uses of this material, except as exempted by the above statement, requires written permission or a license from the AMS. Additional details are provided in the AMS Copyright Policy, available on the AMS Web site located at (<http://www.ametsoc.org/AMS>) or from the AMS at 617-227-2425 or copyright@ametsoc.org.
- ◇ section 9: Any copy maintained and distributed (with permission) by an entity or individual on a non-AMS server after the copyright has been transferred to the AMS must contain the following notice: Permission to place a copy of this work on this server has been provided by the AMS. The AMS does not guarantee that the copy provided here is an accurate copy of the published work.
1. ◇ post a copy of the work on the author's personal homepage on a non-AMS server for noncommercial distributions, provided the AMS copyright notice (see section 1) is attached to the personal copy along with a notice regarding the definitive version of the work (see section 9).

- ◇ Definition of Personal homepage: A homepage under the direct control of an individual and not intended to serve as an interface for a broad group of users of a server. Typically, an institution or department would operate an institutional or departmental homepage on a server, and individuals might choose to place personal homepages on the server as well, which may or may not be connected through links to the institutional or departmental homepage but would not have their URLs publicized as one of the primary links to the institution or department server.
2. Open notice of submission for publication: An author who submits a work for consideration by an AMS editor should include the following notice on any copy of the work posted on a server: This work has been submitted for publication. Copyright in this work may be transferred without further notice, and this version may no longer be accessible.
3. ◇ authors who maintain personal collections should implant a link to the definitive version maintained by the AMS and should distribute only links pointing to the AMS definitive version.
- ◇ Immediately upon transfer of the copyright, authors must incorporate the AMS copyright notice (see section 1) into any copy of the work made available to others.
4. ◇ For a work that was posted on an e-print server prior to the transfer of copyright to the AMS, permission is granted under this policy for the work to remain on that e-print server until publication by the AMS
- ◇ Entities or individuals operating e-print servers may replace the removed copy of the work, at the discretion of the server operators, with an abstract from and/or a summary of the work, along with a full citation to the AMS publication that can contain a link to the definitive copy of the work that resides on the AMS server.
5. ◇ provided the notice discussed in section 9 is included at the time the copyright is transferred (when the work is accepted for publication).
- ◇ e-print servers not displaying a server notice similar to the one shown above are required to remove the copy of the work at the time of copyright transfer to the AMS.
6. ◇ The work must be removed from the e-print server at the time of publication — no later than the first of the month following the issue of the AMS publication containing the work.

0. For ASBMB Journals: Journal of Biological Chemistry, Molecular and Cellular Proteomics, Journal of Lipid Research, ASBMB Today.

1. You are free to copy, distribute, transmit and to adapt the work under the following conditions:

◇ Attribution. You must attribute the work in the manner specified by the original source

◇ Noncommercial. You may not use the work for commercial purposes; including original authors reusing content by a commercial publisher.

2. The NIH requires that authors of all publications resulting from any NIH supported research deposit the final accepted version of their manuscripts in PubMed Central. ASBMB/JBC will automatically deposit all papers resulting from any NIH support as a service to authors. Authors need do nothing to comply.

0. Some journals may place additional conditions on posting. Please review your correspondence or consult the journal's editorial office for details.
1. Appropriate credit includes the exact copyright notice as printed in the journal. The form of the copyright notice is: © 2xxx by [name of copyright holder].
2. For pre-publication versions of your article (i.e., pre-prints), appropriate credit means a statement prominently displayed on the paper itself, specifying the paper's status, date, and journal name. (For example: "Submitted (or Accepted) for publication to (by) Journal Name on MM/DD/YYYY.") A link to the journal's home page or the journal article should be included whenever possible.
3. may post a copy of your article on your personal or institutional web server, provided that the server is non-commercial and not intended for the systematic storage, retrieval, and delivery of scholarly material. Appropriate credit should be given to the journal as described previously.
4. We encourage you to use or refer to the final, definitive version of your article whenever possible. You have the choice of posting the PDF version of your article or posting the citation, abstract (if present), and a link to the HTML version hosted on the Press' s web site. You may not, however, post proofs of your article.
5. no conditions on posting a paper intended for submission (but not yet submitted) to one of our journals, except to note that posting a paper online may, in some cases, constitute prior publication – for example, posting to a commercial venue and/or to a venue with a formal review and approval process.
6. ◇ To avoid citation confusion, we discourage online posting of pre-publication versions of articles, but in most cases do not restrict posting of a paper accepted for publication provided that the conditions described in these Guidelines have been met.

- ◇ Some journals, however, do not allow pre-publication versions to be posted or impose additional restrictions; please consult the journal's editorial office for details.
7. We encourage you to use or refer to the final, published version of your article on your personal or institutional web server as soon as it is available (remember that articles published by the Press are usually made available online before the print edition is released).
8. Articles posted to an archive or institutional repository, however, may not be made publicly available until the appropriate embargo period has been observed
9. ◇ may place your published article in a non-commercial data repository maintained by an institution of which you are a member, provided you meet all relevant conditions described in these Guidelines and in the editorial office's communications with you. An institutional repository, as distinguished from your personal or departmental web site, is designed for the systematic storage, retrieval, and delivery of scholarly material. Your article may be made publicly available after the appropriate embargo period* has been observed. You are responsible for informing the manager of the institutional repository of the embargo period that must be observed.
- ◇ The embargo period is 3 years after publication for Publications of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific and 12 months for all other journals.
10. To avoid citation confusion, we discourage online posting of pre-prints and working papers. If you choose to submit a pre-publication version of your accepted paper to a non-commercial, discipline-specific pre-print or working paper archive, however, we require that appropriate credit be given to the journal as described above and ask you to remove the working paper from the archive after your article is published or replace it with the published version.
11. ◇ If you deposit the published version of your article, it may be made publicly available after the appropriate embargo period* has been observed. You are responsible for informing the manager of the archive of the embargo period that must be observed.
- ◇ The embargo period is 3 years after publication for Publications of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific and 12 months for all other journals.
12. Authors whose research was funded in whole or in part by the National Institutes of Health (NIH), the Wellcome Trust, or the Medical Research Council (MRC UK) may deposit the accepted manuscript with PubMed Central or PubMed Central UK, with release to the public twelve (12) months after publication for NIH-funded research or six (6) months after publication for Wellcome Trust-funded and Medical Research Council-funded research. Only the final accepted manuscript may be submitted; authors may not submit proofs or the published article to PubMed Central or PubMed Central UK.

0. Authors cannot reproduce the Article for commercial purposes
1. ◇ post an electronic version of the Article on their personal website, their employer's website/repository and on free public servers in their subject area.
◇ Provided they acknowledge that the Article has been submitted for publication in the journal from the relevant society and Wiley-Blackwell
2. ◇ the version that incorporates all amendments made during peer review, but prior to the publisher's copy-editing and typesetting.
◇ An electronic copy of the article (with a link to the online version) can be posted on their own website, employer's website/repository and on free public servers in the subject area. For full details see authorservices.wiley.com/bauthor/faqs_copyright.asp.
◇ When posting on the web, authors must give full bibliographic details plus a link to the published version of the Article as follows: 'The definitive version is available at www3.interscience.wiley.com '.
◇ Provided they give appropriate acknowledgment to the journal, the relevant society and Wiley-Blackwell
3. post their version of the Article on their personal website, their employer's website/repository and on free public servers in their subject area after the embargo period stipulated by the journal has been passed (note that the embargo period will vary by journal, e.g. 6 months or 12 months, and that some journals do not have any embargo on self-archiving at all; This embargo period is clearly stipulated on copyright agreements and in the terms and conditions relating to the use of PDF offprints.).
4. ◇ The authors of Articles which are published in Wiley-Blackwell journals will be able to provide their final version of their Articles for posting and can confirm the embargo period on posting the Article on the web.
◇ The institutional repository record should include full bibliographic details and provide a link so that users can make reference to the final published version of the Article.
5. Use of publisher PDF: no systematic distribution of the Contribution, e.g. posting on a listserve, website or automated delivery.
6. Wiley-Blackwell has agreements with certain funding agencies governing reuse of this version. The details of those relationships, and other offerings allowing open web use, are set forth at the following website: <http://www.wiley.com/go/funderstatement>
